

BingoTek Announces First UK Bingo License

It's 'Eyes Down' as BingoTek and Cyberslotz.co.uk Team Up

March 28, 2006 (London, UK) – BingoTek (www.bingotek.com) has consolidated its position as the leading provider of online bingo after securing its first licensing deal in the UK with RAL Interactive Limited, operators of Cyberslotz Bingo (www.cyberslotz.co.uk).

The UK bingo game utilises advanced technology to provide a game specifically designed to replicate the atmosphere of the traditional bingo club experience. Realistic graphics and UK-specific chat sounds give the game an authentic UK bingo hall quality. UK bingo uses 90 numbers and has rules uniquely different to the 75 number US version where cards are sold as 'tickets' and 'books' are sold to a series of games known as a 'session'.

Brian Morgan, Managing Director of RAL Interactive, said: "We are constantly looking at new gaming options to offer our loyal customers and the addition of bingo complements our existing portfolio of games perfectly. BingoTek was the natural choice of partner to team up with, given their track record of success, enthusiasm for product innovation and flexibility in customising their system to suit our requirements."

One of the BingoTek founders and chief consultants Graeme Levin, former founder and operator of the successful gaming portal Gambling.com commented: "We are very excited about this new deal and are confident players will have a most enjoyable experience more in line with what they would experience in a real UK bingo hall."

BingoTek's first licensee, Bingodrome, has proved extremely successful. The popular site has consolidated its position as the best bingo game online by picking up one of the online bingo industry's most prestigious awards, the 'Best Bingo Overall' award from BingoAwards.com for January and February 2006.

"We are delighted at this superb recognition because it is online gamers who have made the voting decision – not industry insiders. We are confident that the bingo site operated by Cyberslotz will be every bit as popular", Graeme said.
